THE GRANGERS BIG PICNIC

Opened at Grange Park Centre Hall, Sunday

A LARGE ATTENDANCE

Promises to be the Most Successful Picnic the Grangers Have Held in Many Years--List of Tent Holders.

THE PROCEEDINGS UP-TO--DATE

[By Roger T. Bayard.]

The encampment and exhibition of the Patrons of Husbandry of Central Pennsylvania opened on Saturday at the Grange Park, at Centre Hall.

The large tents are all occupied by a jolly good set of country people who have come here for a rest and good time after toiling hard all summer with their large "Republican" crops. They are as happy and light hearted set of people as breathes God's pure air.

They have laid aside their plows and other machinery and are taking in the picnic, and as you pass the great crowds you can hear them ask one another how their crops have planned out, and in social, friendly way, they discuss their work and occupation They have come here bringing with them wagon loads of good things to eat, and when their friends and neighbors come to call they are made to feel at home, and partake of their bountiful store.

On Saturday night the members of the Grange held a large festival on the grounds at which a great crowd of people attended. Over forty gallons of ice cream were sold and a number of cakes. The organization realized a neat sum of money from the same. The merry-go-round, is on the ground and is doing an immense business, it is a great attraction for the boys and girls, and they are having barrels of fun riding the horses as the organ peals out the melodious music.

The "taffy-man" from Lancaster is here and is kept busy making the sweet dainties for the boys to give to their girls. He is doing about the best business on the "Pike." Don't forget to call around and see him when you get on the grounds

The "Humped-backed Camel Mule," is another attraction that is taking well on the "Pike."

Thursday a show called the "Train Robbers" pitched their canvas and no doubt will draw large crowds to the performance. On down the "Pike" is the up-to-date establishment of Thornton and Barnes, of Media, who handle groceries, of all description. Davis, of Millheim, and Brown of Milesburg; with their candy and cigars. Malone, Tyrone, withbuggies and harness. Huber, of Mechanicsburg, with notions. Gherrity, of Philadelphia, with an immense line of clothing, and a dozen other places where you can buy candy, pop corn and lemonade.

Perhaps what will attract the most attention of all the country people at the picnic will be the playes given in the evening at the auditorium. The company comes to the park with excellent recommendations, and without a doubt will give the best of satisfaction. They are called the Vincent Dramatic company of Philadelphia. On Monday night they played "Enlisted for the war," Tuesday night, "Uncle Josh," Wednesday night, "My Turn Next," and on Thursday night, "Rascal Pat." We feel safe in recommending this company to the public, and wish for them large crowds every night.

SUNDAY.

Sunday dawned bright and beautifully and at an early hour people from all over the country began driving into the Park until nearly 3000 had arrived to enjoy the day among the "Grangers." in the afternoon Rev. McInay preached a forceful sermon in the Auditorium to a large audience. His text was "Seed Time and Harvest."

The day passed away without any excitement to mar the Sabbath. On Sunday evening it rained a little shower, just enough to settle the dust and cool the air.

Among the great throng from Bellefonte on Sunday were Mr. and Mrs. Clement Dale, Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Gettig, Mr. and Mrs. Irvin Gettig, Mr. and Mrs. Wagner Geiss, Mr. and Mrs. —— Brooks, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Galbraith and family, Sigmond Joseph and friend, Wm. Hockenberry, Orrie Kline, Clark Carson, Mr. and Mrs. R. B Taylor and family and Miss Ursula Bayard were guests on Sunday of Hon. Leonard Rhone and family.

MONDAY.

The country folks who did not move in on Saturday, came in this morning.

The Theatrical Troupe arrived and from the appearance of the young ladies and gentlemen, their play will be all O. K.

Monday was a very busy day here at the Grange Park. A large crowd of country people have been coming and going all day long. Many farmers are moving into their tent homes for the week, and a great number have brouget with them some products which they have raised on their farm at home and placed it on exhibition in the Agricultural department, which has in it choice potatoes, tomatoes, beets, carrots, grapes, peaches, apples, squash, corn, cabbage, cucumbers, Chinese tomatoes, calabask onions, peppers, pumpkins, wheat, oats, barley, beans, peas, and sweet potatoes. Mr, John Ishler has on exhibition 3 potatoes he raised which weighs over five pounds, and he says he has 20 bushels at home just like them.

Down in the poultry department are the finest fowls ever seen at any fair, and it is certainly a beautiful sight to see the different species of chickens raised by the farmers in Centre county.

Then there is on exhibition many fine blooded sheep, pigs, and cattle, and taking it all in all the Grangers picnic is again, what was once known as "The Centre County Fair," only run on a much larger plan and more complete. The fakers are conspicuous by their absence, and the committee in charge have the affair down to a system and allow no gambling devices of any kind on the grounds.

Johnnie Sourbeck arrived on the grounds Monday with his patent popcorn popper, and is doing a mammoth business.

Grace Smith with her magnificent line of illuminum ware is doing a John Wanamaker business, and the reason of it is she has it displayed beautifully in one of the large buildings.

Dr. John Riter is chief of Police and every thing under his care is kept in best kind of order. He has under him as his assistants, Charles Slack, Robt. Sweetwood, James Whirl, Clyde Bradford, who are constantly on the alert to keep order on the grounds.

Mr. Zerby arrived on the grounds Tuesday morning at 7.20 and opened up the Democratic Headquarters. Not more than 75 people visited these tents during the day and half of them were ladies.

The State College exhibit is finer than any ever shown on these grounds.

THE DRAMATIC ENTERTAINMENT.

The Vincent Dramatic Company, fourteen in all with a colored cook arrived at the Park Monday. In the evening they gave their first performance in the auditorium and were greeted by a large audience.

Fred Weaver the boy organist of Bellefonte is playing the piano for the troupe while they are in Centre Hall.

SPECIAL TERM OF COURT.

Held Thursday Morning Before Judge Love.

WANT A NEW TRIAL

Constance Through His Attorneys, H. C. Quigley and W. Harrison Walker Asks for a Reconsideration of His Case.

REASONS FOR SAME PRESENTED

A special session of argument court was held Thursday morning at 10 o'clock with Judge Love on the bench.

Attorney's Quigley and Walker, representing Dominic Constance, presented a petition for a new trial to the Court in the Constance case. The reasons presented are as follows:

And now, to wit:—September 2nd., 1904 the defendant, Dominic Constance, by his attorneys, W. Harrison Walker and H. C. Quigley, files the following reasons in support of the rule to show cause why a new trial should not be granted in the above stated case, as follows, to wit:—

FIRST:—Because the defendant since the trial has discovered that John Hampton, a witness for the Commonwealth, at the time he alleged he was with him (the defendant) at eleven or twelve o'clock of the night of June 12th 1904, that he, the said John Hampton was drunk, so drunk that he was unable to know anything, and and also that he was not at the shanty as testified at said time, and hence his testimony was false and untrue.

That his counsel did not know that said Hampton was a witness in the said case until he was produced at the trial, and that owing to the fact that defendant was confined in jail and could not personally search for witnesses, and that his counsel were ignorant of the alleged testimony; that the same could not have been discovered by reason of diligence which had been exercised by his counsel, and that said evidence being afterwards discovered is not cumulative or corroborative.

SECOND.—Because the jury did not agree upon a verdict from the evidence in the case or the charge of the Court, but from prejudice existing against the defendant by reason of his escaping from Jail; that several members of the jury refused to discuss the evidence in the case, and insisted that the said defendant was guilty on "general principals"

THIRD:—Because one of the jurors made a test in the jury room of the sizes of shoes, and that he put on a No. 7 shoe when in fact he wore a No. 9 shoe, and it was upon this test which was made by the jurors in the jury room that they immediately found a verdict of "guilty," against the defendant.

FOURTH:—Because the evidence in the case was not considered in arriving at the verdict, but that other and out-side matters and tests, entirely foreign to the case, were taken into consideration and a verdict of guilty found contrary to the charge of the Court as well as the evidence of the case.

FIFTH:—Because the verdict was against the evidence as adduced by the witnesses on the witness stand and the law as laid down by the Court in his charge to the jury.

W. HARRISON WALKER,
H. C. QUIGLEY.
Attorneys for Defendant.

Affidavit of Constance attached to said reasons.

NEW TRIAL REFUSED—PRISONERS SENTENCED.

Court called at 2 p. m. Thursday at which time the Court handed down an opinion refusing new trial.

Constance was sent for and sentenced by the Court as follows: To pay a fine of $1,00; the cost of prosecution and to undergo imprisonment at separate and solitary confinement in the Western Penitentiary for 4 years. The Court suspended sentence so far as escaping from jail was concerned.

George Henderson was sentenced to pay a fine of one dollar, the costs of prosecution and under go imprisonment in the Western Penitentiary for two years and eight months. Sentence was also suspended so far as his escape from jail was concerned.

Mike Bartger who was convicted of indecent assault was sentenced to two years n the Western Penitentiary.

AWFUL ACCIDENT.

Its Victim Was a Native of Centre County.

Monday's Altoona Tribune gives the following particulars of an awful accident that occurred to a former Centre Countian.

A fatal and horrible accident occurred at the Pennsylvania Railroad company's freight shop shortly after 10 o'clock Saturday morning as the result of an explosion of an oil tank car which was being repaired. George Bailey, aged 36 years, and residing at 116 East Walnut avenue, was literally blown to pieces, while his fellow workmen made hair breadth escapes from a similar fate.

Tank car No 65568, owned by the company, was sent to the shops to have a safety valve riveted onto the dome, and it was while this work was being done that the accident occurred. Anticipating the work the dome cap had been removed to allow the gas that had accumulated in the tank to escape to render the work less hazardous and dangerous. The work was begun about 9 o'clock by George Bailey and his helper, A. A. Walker, of 309 Howard avenue. Bailey crawled into the dome of the tank and seated himself on the rim made by the joining of the dome to the tank proper, while Walker worked from the outside. The valve was fitted on and the work of riveting it on was started. Gang Foreman George Harpster was watching the work from the floor at the side of the car. Walker procured a hot rivet, inserted it in the flange of the valve and hammered it through until it protruded through to the interior of the dome.

The red hot rivet ignited the gas that had accumulated in the tank and almost instantly there was a terrific explosion that was heard all through the shop. Bailey was shot out of the dome like a bullet from a cannon and went high in the air over a 100 feet. A number of shopmen saw the horrifying sight and turned away with a shudder. Bailey's body in falling plunged through a skylight in the freight shop, breaking a half dozen lights and tearing away a portion of the roof, and dropped in a mangled heap on the shop floor. His body was literally blown to pieces and bits of flesh were picked up and sent to Undertaker Lafferty's morgue to prepare for burial.

Walker made a narrow escape from injury, but beyond a few bruises was unhurt. He was knocked off the car by the explosion. He did'nt see Bailey's body being shot into the air and as soon as he recovered he crawled up on the car and into the tank to ascertain his fate.

Foreman Harpster was not hurt, though it is a miracle that the big oil tank was not blown to atome, but by good fortune it stood the awful pressure of the explosion. Had it gone to pieces many more men might have been killed. Deputy Coroner McCartney is investigating the accident. It is not known what the car contained previous to having been sent to the shop for repairs. Those of the shopmen who witnessed the explosion say it beggars description and was the most horrifying sight they ever saw.

George Bailey was born at Pine Grove Mills, Centre County, May 31, 1868, and had resided in Altoona for the past nine years. He entered the employ of the company in the freight shop July 19, 1895. He was regarded as an excellent, competent and careful workman and was esteemed by his fellow shopmen. He was married eighs years ago to Miss Maggie Kline, at Oak Hall, Centre county, who survives with two children, Edna and Eva; also by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Bailey, of Pine Grove Mills, and these brothers and sisters: Calvin, of State College; Stewart, Paul, Nannie and Mary, all at home.

He was a member of the United Presbyterian church, was respected in the community in which he lived and by a wide circle of friends. Funeral services were conducted in the United Presbyterian church at 7.30 o'clock Sunday evening by Rev. R. A. Hutchinson. Monday morning at 10 o'clock brief services were conducted at his late home, after which the remains were taken on main line express to Oak Hall, Centre county, for interment.

Sunday evening very impressive services in memory of Mr. Bailey were held in the United Presbyterian church. Fully 7000 persons were present. The pastor, Rev. R. A. Hutchison, preached impressively from John xiii-7: "What I do thou knowest not now, but thou shalt know hereafter." Mr. Bailey has been active in church work and was a most exemplary citizen.

—The ladies of the Methodist church will hold a big sociable this evening in the lecture room at the church. Ice cream, cake and other delicacies will be served.

THE COMMITTEE REPORTS

Centre County Republican Club Ready.

TO TRANSACT BUSINESS.

A List of Officers Recommended and Unanimously Elected at Friday Nights Meeting.

GREAT INTEREST MANIFESTED.

The regular meeting of the Centre County Republican Club held in the Bush Arcade hall Friday evening was largely attended and was very enthusiastic. The principal business transacted was the hearing of the report of the committee on permanent organization. It was unanimously adopted and the club is now ready for business. The report was as follows"

REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON ORGANIZATION.

Your Committee appointed to effect a permanent organization would respectfully report.

1st. We would suggest the name for the organization as the Republican Club of Centre County.

2nd. That the officers of the permanent organization be as follows:

President Hon. A. O. Furst.

Vice-President, James P. Coburn, Noah H. Swayne, Hard P. Harris, John Meese, Harry Curtin, Budd Thompson, John I. Curtin, T. B. Buddinger, S. H. Williams, M. S. Betz, G. E. Haupt, A. Katz, T. M. Gramley, J. S. McCargar, Henry Kline, Geo. Yarnell.

CLEMENT DALE,
H. C. QUIGLEY,
W. T. ROYER,
JOHN D. LOVE,
E. C. TUTEN.

Surprised Their Friends.

Mr. John W. Kramer, formerly of this place, but now in the employ of the Bellwood Mfg., Company at Bellwood. Pa., and Miss Ida May Sharp, the youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Sharp, of East Lamb street, sprang a surprise on their many friends on Saturday by quietly slipping away to Pitcairn, Pa., where at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Blair Mattern they were united in marriage by Rev. Burgess, the Methodist pastor at that place.

Mr. and Mrs. Kramer will make their future home at Bellwood. Both the bride and groom were quite well known and very popular young people of our town. The bride was a compositor in the Republican office for the past year and was a bright and intelligent young lady. She is of a sunny disposition and we feel sure she will make an excellent housekeeper and a good helpmate through life.

The Republican office extends congratulations and best wishes to Mr. and Mrs. Kramer.

Democratic County Cenvention.

The adjourned Democratic County convention met in the Court House Tuesday morning at 11 o'clock. Col. J. L. Spangler presided and Harry Jackson, of Bellefonte, and Harry McManaway, of Wolf's Store, were secretaries. There was very little business to be transacted, simply the selection of conferees to the district conference to name a candidate for State Senator.

On motion of Ex-Senator William C. Heinle, the following named gentlemen were selected as conferees: J. C. Meyer, James Schofield and M. I. Gardner. They go to the conference uninstructed. It is understood however that they will support Senator Heinle for the nomination if he is a candidate.

Speeches were made by Senator Heinle, D. F. Fortney, J. C. Meyer, James Schofield, Capt. Taylor, Col. Spangler and lawyer Hipple, of Lock Haven.

—Don't forget the social at the Methodist church this evening, Ice cream, cake, and candy will be for sale.

THE PRESIDENT GIVES ORDERS.

Prompt Action Taken in Regard to Russian Ship Lena.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 15.—Acting Secretary of State Adee today gave out the following statement regarding the Russian ship Lena was at San Francisco.

"The President has today issued an order, through the acting Secretary of State, directing that the Russian armed transport Lena now at San Francisco, be taken in custody by the naval authorities of the United States and disarmed. The main features of the conditions prescribed are that the Lena be taken to Mare Island navy yard and there disarmed by removing all of her small guns, breech blocks of large guns small guns, ammunition and ordnance stores and such other armanent as may be prescribed by the commandment of the navy yard; that the captain give a written guarantee that the Lena shall not leave San Francisco until peace shall have been concluded; that the officers and crew shall be paroled not to leave San Francisco until some other understanding as to their disposal may be reached between the United States government and both the belligerents; that after disarmament the vessel may be removed to a private dock for such reasonable repairs as will make her seaworthy and preserve her in good condition during her detention, or she may be so repaired at the navy yard if the Russian commander should so elect; that while at a private dock the commandant of the navy yard at Mare Island shall have custody of the ship and the repairs shall be overseen by an engineer officer to be detailed by the commandant and that, when so repaired, if peace shall not then have been concluded, the vessel shall be taken back to the Mare Island navy yard and be there held in custody until the end of the war.

This action has been taken on the written request of the commander of Lena, addressed to Rear Admiral Goodrick, setting forth that as the vessel is incapable of putting to sea without needful repairs she must disarm, and asking that needful repairs be permitted after disarmament.

The Secretary of the Navy has telegraphed the President's order to San Francisco and given instructions to Admiral Goodrich and to Captain McCalla the commandant of the Mare Island navy yard, to carry out its provisions.

Bar Harbor, Me., Sept. 16.—After being in communication with the State Department at Washington regarding the Russian ship Lena, Count Cassini, the Russian Ambassador this afternoon cabled his own Government concerning certain details of the matter. The Ambassador said that the State Department desires to ascertain Russian's position, that is, to just what extent the dismantlement should be carried and how long the Russian Government would estimate the time required by the Lena in making repairs to fit her for sea.

Count Cassini understands the Czar is not in St. Petersburg at the present time and does not expect an answer for twenty-four or perhaps forty-eight hours. He said that he had no doubt that the matter would be amicably arranged and the incident satisfactorily closed.

Public Spirited Citizens.

Bellefonte has in it two generous hearted citizens in Col. J. L. Spangler and Col. W. Fred Reynolds. As everyone knows the Bellefonte hospital is one of our most worthy institutions and is doing a work for sick and suffering humanity in Centre county that is deserving of every encouragement possible to give.

It became known that the hospital was in need of coal and Col, Spangler donated a car load of soft coal. As it will be several days before the car load can reach them from the mines, Col. W. Fred Reynolds sent them free of charge two tons of soft coal from the Fuel & Supply Company's yard at this place.

An indignant "No!" was about to pass his lips when he suddenly checked himself and said more mildly: "There may have been a similarity. I hardly know. I have seen too little of Miss Tuttle's hand to judge."

This occasioned a diversion. Specimens of Miss Tuttle's handwriting were produced, which, after having been duly proved, were passed down to the jury along with the communication professedly signed by Mrs. Jeffrey. The grunts of astonishment which ensued as the knowing heads drew near over these several papers caused Mr. Jeffrey to flush and finally to cry out with startling emphasis:

"I know that those words were written by my wife."

But when the coroner asked him his reasons for this conviction he could or would not state them.

"I have said," he stolidly repeated, and that was all.

The coroner made no comment, but when after some further inquiry which added little to the general knowledge he dismissed Mr. Jeffrey and recalled Loretta there was that in his tone which warned us that the really serious portion of the day's examination was about to begin.

CHAPTER XIII.

THE appearance of this witness had undergone a change since she last stood before us. She was shamefaced still, but her manner showed resolve and a feverish determination to face the situation which could but awaken in the breasts of those who had Mr. Jeffrey's honor and personal welfare at heart a nameless dread, as if they already foresaw the dark shadow which minute by minute was slowly sinking over a household which up to a week ago had been the envy and admiration of all Washington society.

The first answer she made revealed both the cause of her shame and the reason of her firmness. It was in response to the question whether she, Loretta, had seen Miss Tuttle before she went out on the walk she was said to have taken immediately after Mrs. Jeffrey's final departure from the house.

Her words were these:

"I did, sir. I do not think Miss Tuttle knows it, but I saw her in Mrs. Jeffrey's room. I am not especially proud of what I did that night, but I was led into it by degrees, and I am sure I beg the jury's pardon." And then she went on to relate how after she had seen Mrs. Jeffrey leave the house she went into her room with the intention of putting it to rights. As this was no more than her duty, no fault could be found with her, but she owned that when she had finished this task and removed all evidence of Mrs. Jeffrey's frenzied condition she had no business to linger at the table turning over the letters she found lying there.

Her cheeks were burning now, for she had found herself obliged to admit that she had read enough of these letters to be sure that they had no reference to the quarrel then pending between her mistress and Mr. Jeffrey. Her eyes fell and she looked seriously distressed as she went on to say that she was as conscious then as now of having no business with these papers; so conscious, indeed, that when she heard Miss Tuttle's step at the door, her one idea was to hide herself.

That she could stand and face that lady never so much as occurred to her. Her own guilty consciousness made her cheeks too hot for her to wish to meet an eye which had never rested on her any too kindly; so noticing how straight the curtains fell over one of the windows on the opposite side of the room, she dashed toward it and slipped in out of sight just as Miss Tuttle came in. This window was one seldom used, owing to the fact that it overlooked an adjoining wall, so she had no fear of Miss Tuttle approaching it. Consequently, she could stand there quite at her ease, and, as the curtains in falling behind her had not come quite together, she really could not help seeing what that lady did.

Here the witness paused with every appearance of looking for some token of disapprobation from the crowd.

But she encountered nothing there but eager anxiety for her to proceed, so without waiting for the coroner's question she added in so many words:

"She went first to the bookshelves."

We had expected it; but yet a general movement took place, and a few suppressed exclamations could be heard.

"And what did she do there?"

"Took down a book, after looking carefully up and down the shelves."

"What color of book?"

"A green one with red figures on it. I could see the cover plainly as she took it down."

"Like this one?"

"Exactly like that one."

"And what did she do with this book?"

"Opened it, but not to read it. She was too quick in closing it for that."

"Did she take the book away?"

"No; she put it back on the shelf."

"After opening and closing it?"

"Yes, sir."

"Did you see whether she put anything into the book?"

"I cannot swear that she did, but then her back was to me, and I could not have seen it if she had."

The implied suggestion caused some excitement, but the coroner, frowning

Loretta's testimony creates a sensation

on this, pressed the girl to continue, asking if Miss Tuttle left the room immediately after turning from the bookshelves. Loretta replied no; that, on the contrary, she stood for some minutes near them, gazing in what seemed like a great distress of mind straight upon the floor, after which she moved in an agitated way and with more than one anxious look behind her into the adjoining room, where she paused before a large bureau. As this bureau was devoted entirely to Mr. Jeffrey's use, Loretta experienced some surprise at seeing his wife's sister approach it in so stealthy a manner. Consequently she was watching with all her might when this young lady opened the upper drawer and with very evident emotion thrust her hand into it.

What she took out or whether she took out anything this spy upon her movements could not say, for when Loretta heard the drawer being pushed back into place she drew the curtains close, perceiving that Miss Tuttle would have to face this window in coming back. However, she ventured upon one other peep through them just as that lady was leaving the room and remembered as if it were yesterday how clay white her face looked and how she held her left hand pressed close against the folds of her dress. It was but a few minutes after that Miss Tuttle left the house.

As we all knew what was kept in that drawer, the conclusion was obvious. She wished to see if his pistol was still there or if it had been taken away by her sister.

The temerity which had made it possible to associate the name of such a man as Francis Jeffrey with an outrageous crime having been thus in a measure explained, the coroner recalled that gentleman and again thoroughly surprised the gaping public.

Had the witness accompanied his wife to the Moore house?

"No."

Had he met her there by any appointment he had made with her or which had been made for them both by some third person?

"No."

Had he been at the Moore house on the night of the 11th at any time previous to the hour when he was brought there by the officials?

"No."

Would he glance at this impression of certain finger tips which had been left in the dust of the southwest chamber mantel?

He had already noted them.

Now would he place his left hand on the paper and see—

"It is not necessary," he burst forth, in great heat. "I own to those marks. That is, I have no doubt they were made by my hand." Here, unconsciously, his eyes flew to the member thus referred to, as if conscious that in some way it had proved a traitor to him; after which his gaze traveled slowly my way, with an indescribable question in it which roused my conscience and made the trick by which I had got the impression of his hand seem less of a triumph than I had heretofore considered it. The next minute he was answering the coroner under oath, very much as he had answered him in the unofficial interview at which I had been present.

"I acknowledge having been in the Moore house and even having been in its southwest chamber, but not at the time supposed. It was on the previous night." He went on to relate how, being in a nervous condition and having the key to this old dwelling in his pocket, he had amused himself by going through its dilapidated interior. All of this made a doubtful impression which was greatly emphasized when, in reply to the inquiry as to where he got the light to see by, he admitted that he had come upon a candle in an upstairs room and made use of that; though he could not remember what he had done with this candle afterward, and looked dazed and quite at sea, till the coroner suggested that he might have carried it into the closet of the room where his fingers had left their impression in the dust of the mantelshelf.

Then he broke down like a man from whom some prop is suddenly snatched and looked around for a seat. This was given him, while a silence, the most dreadful I ever experienced, held every one there in check. But he speedily rallied and, with the remark that he was a little confused in regard to the incidents of that night, waited with a wild look in his averted eye for the coroner's next question.

Unhappily for him, it was in continuation of the same subject. Had he bought candles or not at the grocer's around the corner? Yes, he had. Before visiting the house? Yes. Had he also bought matches? Yes. What kind? Common safety matches. Had he noticed when he got home that the box he had just bought was half empty? No. Nevertheless he had used many matches in going through this old house, had he not? Possibly. To light his way upstairs, perhaps? It might be. Had he not so used them? Yes. Why had he done so if he had candles in his pocket, which were so much easier to hold and so much more lasting than a lighted match? Ah, he could not say; he did not know; his mind was confused. He was awake when he should have been asleep. It was all a dream to him.

The coroner became still more persistent.

"Did you enter the library on your solitary visit to this old house?"

"I believe so."

"What did you do there?"

"Pottered around. I don't remember."

"What light did you use?"

"A candle, I think."

"You must know."

"Well, I had a candle. It was in a candelabrum."

"What candle and what candelabrum?"

"The same I used upstairs, of course."

"And you cannot remember where you left this candle and candelabrum when you finally quitted the house?"

"No. I wasn't thinking about candles."

"What were you thinking about?"

"The rupture with my wife and the bad name of the house I was in."

"Oh! And this was on Tuesday night?"

"Yes, sir."

"How can you prove this to us?"

"I cannot."

"But you swear"—

"I swear that it was Tuesday night, the night immediately preceding the one when—when my wife's death robbed me of all earthly happiness."

It was feelingly uttered, and several faces lightened; but the coroner repeating, "Is there no way you can prove this to our satisfaction?" the shadow settled again, and on no head more perceptibly than on that of the unfortunate witness.

It was now late in the day and the atmosphere of the room had become stifling, but no one seemed to be conscious of any discomfort, and a general gasp of excitement passed through the room when the coroner, taking out a box from under a pile of papers, disclosed to the general gaze the famous white ribbon with its dainty bow, lying on top of the fatal pistol.

That this special feature, the most interesting one of all connected with this tragedy, should have been kept so long in reserve and brought out just at this time, struck many of Mr. Jeffrey's closest friends as unnecessarily dramatic; but when the coroner, lifting out the ribbon, remarked tentatively, "You know this ribbon?" we were more struck by the involuntary cry of surprise which rose from some one in the crowd about the door than by the look with which Mr. Jeffrey eyed it and made the necessary reply. That cry had something more than nervous excitement in it. Identifying the person who had uttered it as a certain busy little woman well known in town, I sent an officer to watch her; then recalled my attention to the point the coroner was attempting to make. He had forced Mr. Jeffrey to recognize the ribbon as the one which had fastened the pistol to his wife's arm. Now he asked whether, in his opinion, a woman could tie such a bow to her own wrist, and when in common justice Mr. Jeffrey was obliged to say no, waited a third time before he put the general suspicion again into words:

The telltale ribbon

"Can you not, by some means or some witness, prove to us that it was on Tuesday night and not on Wednesday you spent the hours you speak of on this scene of your marriage and your wife's death?"

The hopelessness which more than once had marked Mr. Jeffrey's features since the beginning of this inquiry reappeared with renewed force as this suggestive question fell again upon his ears, and he was about to repeat his plea of forgetfulness when the coroner's attention was diverted by a request made in his ear by one of the detectives. In another moment Mr. Jeffrey had been waved aside and a new witness sworn in.

You can imagine every one's surprise, mine most of all, when this witness proved to be Uncle David.

CHAPTER XIV.

I DO not know why the coroner had so long delayed to call this witness. What he said was in the way of confirming the last witness' testimony as to his having been at the Moore house on Tuesday evening. Mr. Moore, who was very particular as to dates and days, admitted that the light which he had seen in a certain window of his ancestral home on the evening when he summoned the police was but the repetition of one he had detected there the evening before. It was this repetition which alarmed him and caused him to break through all his usual habits and leave his home at night to notify the police.

The coroner asked him if he had seen Mr. Jeffrey go in on the night in question; if he had ever seen any one go in there since the wedding, or even if he had seen any one loitering about the steps or sneaking into the rear yard. But the answer was always no; these same noes growing more and more emphatic, and the gentleman more and more impenetrable and dignified as the examination went on. In fact, he was as unassailable a witness as I have ever heard testify before any jury. Beyond the fact already mentioned of his having observed a light in the opposite house on the two evenings in question he admitted nothing. His life in the little cottage was so engrossing, he had his organ, his dog, why should he look out of the window? Had it not been for his usual habit of letting his dog run the pavements for a quarter of an hour before finally locking up for the night he would not have seen as much as he did.

"Have you any stated hour for doing this?" the coroner now asked.

"Yes; half past 9."

"And was this the hour when you saw that light?"

"Yes; both times."

As he had appeared at the station house at a few minutes before 10, he was probably correct in this statement.

He wound up with such a distinct repetition of his former emphatic assertion as to the presence of light in the old house on Tuesday as well as Wednesday evening that Mr. Jeffrey's testimony in this regard received a decided confirmation. I looked to see some open recognition of this, when suddenly and with a persistence understood only by the police the coroner recalled Mr. Jeffrey and asked him what proof he had to offer that his visit of Tuesday had not been repeated the next night and that he was not in the building when that fatal trigger was pulled.

At this leading question a lawyer sitting near me edged himself forward as if he hoped for some sign from Mr. Jeffrey which would warrant him in interfering. But Mr. Jeffrey gave no such sign. I doubt if he even noticed this man's proximity, though he knew him well and had often employed him as his legal adviser in times gone by. He was evidently exerting himself to recall the name which so persistently eluded his memory, putting his hand to his head and showing the utmost confusion.

"I cannot give you one," he finally stammered. "There is a man who could tell if only I could remember his name." Suddenly, with a loud cry which escaped him involuntarily, he gave a gurgling laugh, and we heard the name "Tallman!" leap from his lips.

The witness had at last remembered whom he had met at the cemetery gate at the hour or near the hour his wife lay dying in the lower part of the city.

The effect was electrical. One of the spectators—some country boor, no doubt—so far forgot himself as to cry out loud enough for all to hear:

"Tallman! Let us have Tallman!"

Of course he met with an instant rebuke, but I did not wait to hear it or to see order restored, for a glance from the coroner had already sent me to the door in search of this new witness.

My destination was the Cosmos club, for Phil Tallman and his habits and haunts were as well known in Washington as the figure of Liberty on the summit of the capitol dome. When I saw him I did not wonder. Never have I seen a more amiable looking man or one with a more absentminded expression. To my query as to whether he had ever met Mr. Jeffrey at or near the entrance of Rock Creek cemetery he replied with an amazed look and the quick response:

"Of course I did. It was the very night that his wife— But what's up? You look excited for a detective."

"Come to the morgue and see. This testimony of yours will prove invaluable to Mr. Jeffrey."

The result was an absolute proof that Mr. Jeffrey had been near Soldiers' home as late as 7, which was barely fifteen minutes previous to the hour Mrs. Jeffrey's watch was stopped by her fall in the old house on Waver-

WOMAN'S LITTLE WAY.

Serventor settled back comfortably in his chair and lit the after-dinner cigar to which he had limited himself in deference to his wife's fears that he was injuring health by excessive smoking.

"Oh!" he exclaimed suddenly. "what do you think? Willington has backed out of that little stag party at Renford's. His wife wouldn't let him go. Wouldn't that give you a nervous chill? Adeline, if I had a wife like that I'd be tempted to take a club to her. I don't suppose he dares open his mouth around the house without raising his hand to ask permission.

"How would you like to have it said that your husband stood in terror of you, little woman?" he asked jocularly.

"I wouldn't like it at all," replied Mrs. Serventor, promptly. "I believe in a man doing what he pleases as long as he doesn't misconduct himself. I'm not an advanced woman like Mrs Willington, you know."

"No, you're not, by George!" said her husband, admiringly.

"Besides, I know you wouldn't stand dictation," laughed the lady.

"Well, I guess not," said Sarventor.

"What kind of a party is this, Edward?" asked Mrs. Sarventor presently, as she threaded a needle.

"Oh, just men, you know,"

"Are they nice?"

"It depends on what you call nice. It isn't like a pink tea."

"I suppose you will all smoke like chimneys and play cards. Well, of course, you will go if you want to."

"Why, certainly."

"You needn't be cross about it, Edward." I'm not cross.

"I don't see any reason why you should be."

"I might not like it, though. I wouldn't wonder a bit if they played cards for money—and that's gambling. You don't blame me for not wanting my husband to be a gambler. That wouldn't be reasonable, would it, dear?"

"Why, Adeline! Suppose it was a penny ante—enough to give an interest to the game?"

"The principle is the same. But, of course, my narrow views needn't stand in the way of your having a good time."

"Oh, thunder!"

"Now you are losing your temper. Well, we won't say anything more about it. You've made up your mind that you'll go whether I like it or not or whether it's right or wrong. I wouldn't say a word for the world to displease you. You know I wouldn't, Edward. I don't like to have you cross."

"But, my dear!"

"No, we won't say anything more about it. And then you'll be tempted to smoke more than is good for you. I know you won't break your promise to me, but—"

"What promise?"

"About smoking more than one cigar in an evening."

"Adeline, I just said I'd try it for awhile and see how it went."

"Then you intend to. Oh, Edward!"

"Nonsense. You aren't talking reasonably, my dear. You just don't want me to go."

"No, I want you to go, If you prefer the society of a set or horrid card-playing men to your wife's I ought not to complain. I ought to be g-g-glad."

"Why, Adeline, my dear!"

"No, I'm not. You know I'm not. You dud-dud-don't love me."

"Of course, I do. You know perfectly well I do."

Mrs. Sarventor put aside her husband's caressing hand and dried her eyes. Then she said: "This is very foolish of me, Edward. I ought to be ashamed of myself, and I am, too. Of course, you must go, dear. You know I would never oppose you in anything. We've been married over a year now and, of course, I ought not to expect that you wouldn't get just a little tired of a silly girl in all that time."

"Dearest," said Sarventor, "how can you say such absurb things? Tired of you!"

"I suppose if I had made our little home attractive—"

"You've made it a little paradise."

"And of course you miss all your old backelor habits."

"Miss nothing I know when I'm well off."

"Then why," demanded Mrs. Sarventor, "are you so crazy to go to this horrid stag party?"

"I'm not crazy about it. I don't care a thing about it. I don't know that I'd go if I hadn't promised—at least I half promised."

"Then you won't go? Oh, good!"

"Not if you don't want me to, dearest."

"Oh, but I don't you to stay at home just because you know I'd be hurt if you went, I wan't you to do exactly as you please. You'd better go, perhaps, dear."

"Well, I don't want to," said Sarventor. "I want to stay and spend the evening with you, and that settles it." Chicago News.

LANDSLIDE IN NOVEMBER

TRENTON, September 19.—Great confidence in the success of the Republican party at the polls in November is felt by United States Senator John F. Dryden, who predicts that both the state and national tickets will experience a landslide in the direction of Republicanism. In discussing the political outlook he says:

"Only a complete revolution in public sentiment—a possibility seemingly precluded by existing conditions—can, in my opinion, prevent an overwhelming Republican victory, national and local, in November next. If the elections were to occur at once there would be no occasion for the qualifying clause. As to future developments I do not see how any impartial mind can find anything in the existing conditions or the conduct of the campaign as thus far outlined by the two parties to justify a fear of any radical change in the political sentiment during the comparatively few remaining weeks before election.

"There are various reasons for this condition, but the chief contributing factors, in my opinion, are these:

"First, the satisfactory and wholesome condition generally of business throughout the country—a condition of prosperity that is felt and appreciated by all classes of citizens.

"Second, the personality of the President, and particularly with the independent voter, the first voter, and even with Democrats—young men who admire his earnestness and honesty of purpose and sturdy young manhood.

"It is estimated that about ten per cent. of the voters this year have not hitherto cast a Presidential ballot. These coupled with the independent vote, those who may be swayed by patriotism or perhaps personal business reasons, constitute mainly the balance of power and must therefore be reckoned with. I maintain that it is only reasonable to suppose that the greater portion of this 'balance of power' vote will be for the Republicans and that they will be influenced in their opinions largely because they prefer the positive to the negative character as between the candidates. Apathy has been ascribed in some quarters as a reason for fearing Republican losses in November. I have no fear on this score."

McKeesport's Biggest Building

The following article which reveals the continued success of a former Centre Hall young man, Harry L. Camp, is from the McKeesport Times:

"The new D. L. Clark, Co., skyscraper in Fifth avenue is nearing completion, the finishing touches being put on. It is the finest building in McKeesport and one of the most modern and up-to date candy manufactories in the country. The soda fountains, candy cases and cigar stand will be in the front of the first floor room and they will be fitted with the most elaborate and costly furniture. The restaurant will be in the rear of the first floor and will accommodate about 100 people at one time. Over 100 people, mostly girls, are at work on the 6 floor making and boxing Zig-Zag, the new confection invented by Mr. Camp who is superintendent of the skyscraper. Thousands of pounds of Zig-Zag are being manufactured daily and shipped to various parts of the country. Mr. Camp just received an order today from a firm at the St. Louis world's fair to ship a carload of Zig-Zag at once. On all of the eight floors and the basement of the Clark building is stocked with some of the latest and best machinery for making candy and confections of all kinds."

$100 Reward, $100

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constiutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietor have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

An Advancing Frost Retarded Late Crops.

The frost, which some weeks ago was discovered in the northwestern part of the state, has penetrated to the east-central section. Weather in the northwest is reported to be cold and wet.

Notwithstanding the coolness corn has ripened and cutting has begun. A heavy second crop of clover has been secured.

Apples are dropping. Plums are above the average. Grapes are rotting in some sections. Wheat seeding has begun.

The weather bureau's summary for the week ending Sep. 12 says that "the temperature ranged from normal in the southern to 3 or 4 degrees below the normal in the northern tier of counties and the precipitation was confined to light local showers on the 8th and 9th.

"Lack of moisture materially retarded plowing and seeding, which, however, are well advanced and low night temperatures were unfavorable to late planting of corn.

"Early corn, buckwheat and tobacco are being harvested, and the yield is generally above average; the oat crop is heavy and wheat and rye are somewhat lighter than usual; pastures are fair to good; rot in potatoes continues; garden truck is plentiful and of excellent quality; apples are promising and other fruits, peaches excepted, are average or better.

"Higher temperatures and ample rainfall at an early date would be of material benefit to all maturing crops."

Beauty is born in the blood. Beauty is more than "skin deep," it is blood deep, When the blood is tainted by disease the flesh will feel it and the skin will show it Sallow or muddy complexions, pimples blotches, and eruptions are only the surface signs of impure blood. Face washes lotions, complxion powders, may palliate the evils but they cannot cure the disease. The only cure is to cleanse the blood of the poisonous matter which is the cause of the out break in the flesh and skin. Impure blood can be absolutely purified by the use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. Its effect on flesh and skin is marked. Sores heal and disapear. The skin becomes smooth, and regains its natural color. The eyes brighten and sparkle, the whole body is radiant with the brightness and beauty of health. Work On Abutments at Mill Hall.

Mill Hall, Sept. 17.—Conrad Miller of Bellefonte, who was awarded the contract for erecting the new abutment for the iron bridge near Garth's store, is in this place, and is now getting everything in shape to commence work at once. The excavation is being pushed rapidly, and the old abutment will be removed in a few days, when the wooden bridge will be torn down. Commissioners Gummo, Stoner and Hanna, were here Wednesday afternoon, and viewed the work of excavating. It was learned that the structural material, which was to have been delivered this week, will not be shipped until next month, and will reach here about Oct. 15. At present pedestrians can cross the wooden bridge and vehicles ford the creek a short distance south of the bridge. When erected this new structure will be one of the best in the country.

Surprise Party.

Several young people gathered at the home of W. G. Ogden, S. Thomas St., the occasion being the birthday of their daughter Mildred. Early in the evening Mrs. Ogden went out with Mildred. During that time the young folks took possession of the house, which was darkened on their return. When Mildred entered the room and struck a match she gave a cry of surprise and blew out the match, forgetting to light the lamp. There were several tokens of remembrances. Delightful games were enjoyed, after which refreshments were served, when all departed declaring a pleasant time.

$500 REWARD!
FOR WOMEN

WHO CANNOT BE CURED.

Backed up by over a third of a century of remarkable and uniform cures, a record such as no other remedy for the diseases and weaknesses peculiar to women ever attained, the proprietors of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription now feel fully warranted in offering to pay $500 in legal money of the United States, for any case of Leucorrhea, Female Weakness, Prolapsus, or Falling of Womb which they cannot cure. All they ask is a fair and reasonable trial of their means of cure.

The Vice-President Independent Order of Good Templars.

An experience which many women have was related by Miss Agnes Stebbings, of 231 East 30th Street, New York City, as follows: "I had very poor health for a year until life looked dark and dreary to me. Had headaches, backache, also pain, my sleep was broken and fitful. I longed for health. Tried several medicines but none were of any lasting benefit until I took Doctor Pierce's Favorite Prescription. I soon realized that I had found the right remedy. It helped nature to throw off the poisons that saturated the system, removed all pains and strengthened the digestive organs, and brought the roses of health back to my cheeks. This medicine if taken occasionally keeps the system in perfect condition, helping it to throw off the disease and consequences of exposure to dampness. I am pleased to give it my endorsement."

"Favorite Prescription" makes weak women strong, sick women well. Accept no substitute for the medicine which works wonders for weak women.

COMFORTING WORDS.

MANY A BELLEFONTE HOUSEHOLD WILL FIND THEM SO.

To have the pains and aches of a bad back removed; to be entirely free from annoying, dangerous urinary disorders is enough to make any kidney sufferer grateful. To tell how this great change can be brought about will prove comforting words to hundreds of Bellefonte readers.

James Hassie, farmer, living at Jersey Shore, Pa., says: "I seemed to be unable to find anything to give me relief from backache. I tried all of our home remedies and consulted physicians; besides to grow weaker and more painful. At length I saw Doan's Kidney Pills highly spoken of and recommended by Lock Haven people whom I knew, and I made up my mind to try them. I went to Lock Haven and Mr. Mason, the druggist, told me that I could not find any better medicine. I got a box and began using them, and inside of forty-eight hours I felt decided improvement. I was cured in a short time and have never had backache since. That is proof enough for me of the merits of Doan's Kidney Pills."

EDITORIAL.

CALLING THINGS BY THEIR PROPER NAMES.

In last week's Watchman there appeared an editorial on the judicial contest in Centre county in which that paper promised that as far as they were concerned, the contest should be conducted in a fair and manly manner and that no mud-slinging should be indulged in. We commend the Watchman for this stand which they have taken and had hoped that this was the spirit that was to prevail throughout the campaign. But our hopes were dashed to pieces when we sat in the Court house on Tuesday at the Democratic County convention and listened to the brutal, vindictive entirely uncalled for personal attack on Hon. John G. Love as delivered by the chairman of that convention, the would-be boss and only political toad in the puddle, Colonel Jack Spangler. It was one of the bitterest speeches ever listened to and the personal venom and spite behind it was not concealed in the least. We have always had the greatest respect for Col. Spangler but that speech did not raise him in our estimation in the least. He made a mistake, he overreached the mark and we want to call his attention to it. The people of Centre county are to broad minded to allow the personal animosity of any one man to sway them in the least in their selection of a man to preside over their courts. The day of the mud slinger in campaign's in this country is over, the people are too intelligent for that.

Inspired by a waning cause and with the hope of success going a glimmering, the democrats are throwing caution to the winds and can be depended upon to use every petty trick known to politics to bring victory to their side. Their main hope is to elect Orvis; they concede that Roosevelt and Fairbanks will sweep the county like a whirlwind. And so by a resort to personalities and the meanest kind of politics they hope at least to elect a judge who can be depended upon to help in the future to turn the county from its Republican moorings.

Judge Love's splendid record of ten years on the bench is sufficient answer to all this. He reminds us in this contest of a big mastiff with a lot of snarling rat terriers barkings at his heels. Mark this prediction, the campaign of personal spite will re-act and Judge Love will be re-elected by the largest majority ever given a local candidate in Centre county.

THE BELLEFONTE "REPUBLICAN" FOR 25 CENTS.

In order to place the REPUBLICAN, during the coming campaign, in as many homes as possible, we have decided to make the following liberal offer. On receipt of 25cents, we will mail the REPUBLICAN (weekly) to new subscribers, until JAN. 1, 1905. As the campaign promises to be decidedly exciting and interesting, persons wishing to keep themselves informed on the political situation, should avail themselves of this generous offer. The REPUBLICAN intends taking a leading and decided stand during the campaign, and we promise interesting reading to its subscribers.

JUDGE PARKERS CAREER.

A conscientious and impartial investigation of Judge Parker's career has failed to disclose one word of interest or sympathy in the aspirations, history or literature of the Irish race at home or abroad.

Is not, therefore, this the hour and Roosevelt the man to break the Democratic solidarity of the Irish vote.

Col. Ed. Irvin, the old Bucktail Colonel, will be the next State Senator from this district.

Henry C. Quigley Esq., Centre county's choice for State Senator, made an excellent run in his native bailiwick and can feel justly proud of it.

We heard a candidate on the Democratic county ticket say on Tuesday that Roosevelt and Fairbanks would carry Centre County by a big majority. Nuff Sed.

NO REPUBLICAN SHOULD CUT HIS TICKET.

The election of the Republican candidates for the legislature should be carefully watched.

"The Republican nominees for the state senate and house of representatives should be loyally and energetically supported," said Chairman Penrose, "for the reason that on their election depends the selection of a United States senator for a term of six years from the 4th of next March, and the same exigency exists for the support of the legislature to choose a United States senator as those stated for the election of Republican congressmen.

"In view of the importance attached to the election of the officials herein mentioned, it is plainly the duty of every Republican to refuse to support the claims of individuals, no matter how speciously pressed, unless they are recognized as the regular nominees of the Republican party.

"The speaker of the house of representatives at Washington or Harrisburg might be lost or won by a single vote, and, therefore, I cannot too emphatically impress upon you the importance of supporting the regular Republican nominees, who, if elected, will comply with the usages of the party in attending the party caucuses and abiding by their decrees.

"In view of the issues involved and the embarrassments that might be occasioned to the state and nation," continued Chairman Penrose, "it is to be hoped that every Republican will exert himself in behalf of the regular nominees of his party, in which event I can assure you in advance that a great and overwhelming victory will be recorded in Pennsylvania in November for the entire Republican ticket from top to bottom."

ROOSEVELT LANDSLIDE

Democrats Concede Overwhelming Popular Sentiment Against Them.

PRESIDENT'S LETTER RANG TRUE

He Is Everywhere Praised, While Judge Parker, On the Other Hand, Is Regarded As the Candidate of Wall Street.

[Special Correspondence.]
Harrisburg, Sept. 20.

Now that the political campaign can be said to be fairly under way, interest is taken in the reports that are coming from every section of Pennsylvania regarding the sentiment of the voters toward the rival candidates for the presidency. Men employed in the several state departments who mingle with the voters in their respective counties are in a splendid position to gauge the public pulse. Within the last few days a careful canvass has been made for frank, unbiased and absolutely impartial reports from these men, and visitors who are brought here on official and private business, and there is a remarkable unanimity indicating a great poular tide of sentiment in favor of President Roosevelt's election.

Democrats privately admit this to be a fact, and when talking to friends many of them admit that they have already given up the fight.

Roosevelt's letter of acceptance has probably had more to do with emphasizing the popular feeling regarding his candidacy than any other feature or phase of the canvass.

The President's letter of acceptance rang true. It was characteristic of the man, through and through—honest, frank, straightforward, fearless and patriotic.

His letter may well be perused by all. All will agree, although they may not agree with all of the President's views, that every subject is frankly discussed, that there is no lurking in the dark, no skulking, no ambiguity nor insincerity. Mr. Roosevelt has something important to say, and goes about it in a straightforward, manly way. True, his letter may not abound in figurative language and literary elegance, but it is the product of a man deadly in earnest, possessed of the highest motives.

At the outset Theodore Roosevelt was beset, and probably will continue to be beset, with adverse criticism from the Democratic party, and in every instance he has boldly defended himself; in fact, vindicated himself. The Panama question, the pensions matter, the government expenditure and others are ably defended and justified.

Certainly his attitude toward the Philippine Islands question is just, equitable and sensible. He would give the inhabitants self government and do everything possible to better their condition, but he would be slow to make rash promises, to break faith with the people of the Philippines. Mr. Roosevelt points with pride to Governor Taft's admirable administration in the islands, and shows how disastrous it would be to do anything that would again incite insurrection, now that affairs are progressing so well there.

President Roosevelt's stand on the money question is also admirable, straightforward and certain; no wavering, no equivocation. He justly criticises the Democratic party for its stand on the currency question. "Absurd," says Roosevelt, that the gold standard is irrevocably fixed. What assurance of a stable currency have we? What could we be sure of with a party in power that was not honest enough to insert the all-important plank—the money plank—in its platform?

Last, but not least, President Roosevelt is highly respected and admired by the nations abroad. He is an all-around man, with snap and go—not a puppet—who has come into international prominence. Even in England, where the Republican party's principles are not especially popular, Mr. Roosevelt is greatly admired. A man with a negative personality, one insincere, unpatriotic and selfish, could never have gained this world-wide popularity.

The rank and file of the Democrats of Pennsylvania do not enthuse over the candidacy of Parker. He is looked upon as the candidate of the Wall street money power, and as not in any way representing the sentiments of the old-fashioned Democrats. The feelings of these Democrats are expressed by Thomas Watson, the Populists' candidate for president, who a few days ago said:

"We want to drive out from the temple the money changers who defile it.

"Can I hope to do inside the Democratic party what Bryan so signally failed to do? For eight years he exerted all of his marvelous powers to accomplish something inside the Democratic party. Back of him were hundreds of strong newspapers. He went into the fight followed by a powerful organization; he secured more votes than Grover Cleveland ever had, and yet because he could not succeed within eight years the Democratic party repudiated him and trampled his platform under foot.

"What do the greedy corporation hordes expect from Parker? Are they doing this simply for health and pleasure, or is it a matter of business with them? It is high time that the people of this country woke up to the fact that corporate interests represented by Belmont, Pat McCarren, Lamont, Gorman, Carlisle and Olney are not in the habit of spending their time and their money on any candidate unless they have good reason to believe that they will get value received."

Pay Your Poll Tax.

The last day for the payment of taxes, if you want to vote for president or anybody else this year, is Saturday, October 8th.

Every voter should see to it in person that his taxes are paid on or before October 8.

Why Not?

"If you refuse me I shall never love another woman."

"Does that promise stand good if I accept you?"

The Granger's Big Picnic

The Grangers are doing a big business this week here at the Park More than has been done in many years. The committee feel very highly elated over the beginning of their gathering which promises to be the most successful ever held. The farmers of Centre county are beginning to open their eyes, to see the great advantage it is to be a Granger and be united with an organization of its kind whose principles are wholly to protect the tiller of the soil. It is substantially rumored that a Grangers Bank will be organized before long in Centre county.

The farmers have been very busy today bringing in their stock and products to be put on exhibition, in the Garden and Farm department over 300 different varieties of grain, fruit and vegetables are represented.

EXHIBITORS AND STANDS.

J. H. Malone, hand made harness, Tyrone.

Mifflinburg Buggy Co., represented by S. L. Sando, Spring Mills.

Farm Implements of all description, D. F. Lose, Centre Hall.

Cultivators, J. Fleming, Centre Hall.

Hoff Carriage Co., J. C. Condo, Penn Hall.

National Separator, D. F. Homan, Lemont.

At the Poultry Pen are breeded stock of barred Plymouth Rocks, White Leghorns, Ducks, Geese, Turkeys and Pigeons.

State College exhibit is the best ever witnessed at the Park.

The Farmers exhibit of Garden and Farm is a wonderful sight to behold.

The Wilson Spice company, of Toledo, Ohio, are represented by Mr. W. O. Hoffman who is very courteous and polite in his work of advertising. They give a free cup of coffee to every one who goes to their counter.

Thornton & Barnes, the wholesale grocers of Philadelphia, have a splendid display and in the same building is the firm of Wm. D. Garitee & Son, of the same city who carry a magnificent line of custom made clothing.

UNCLE JOSH.

The large Auditorium was filled on Tuesday evening to witness the Vincent Dramatic Co., of Media, produce the beautiful drama entitled "Uncle Josh," without any exceptions these young ladies and gentlemen are just as good as any that have come down the Pike." they all take their parts splendidly and are perfectly at home on the stage. In this production of "Uncle Josh," Mr. Will Flack, formerly of Bellefonte, made his debut before a Centre county audience taking the principal part of "Uncle Josh," which he carried out to perfection. It could not have been played better by any professional. Mr. Frank D. Suter who has won the admiration of all the campers by his beautiful singing, sang two solos at Tuesday evening's entertainment, entitled "When the Blue Sky turns to Gold," and "In the Valley of Kentucky." He has a magnificent tenor voice which the controls with wonderful advantage. He also played one of the leading parts in "Uncle Josh."

STATE PRESS IS TRUE

Pennsylvania Editors Loyally Supporting Roosevelt and Fairbanks.

HOT SHOT FOR THE OPPOSITION

Loyal Support to the Republican Party's Candidates and the Organization All Along the Line.

Never have the editors of Republican newspapers throughout Pennsylvania manifested a more lively interest in the success of the Republican candidates—local, state and national, than in the present campaign. They have lined up enthusiastically for the whole Republican ticket, and they are daily pouring hot shot into the ranks of the opposition. There is no insurgency, there is no swerving either to the right or left, but all are united in sustaining the magnificent administration of President Roosevelt and in steadfastly supporting the Republican organization. Here are a few excerpts from newspapers published in this state bearing upon the political situation:

Good Politics and Good Sense.

It is very essential to the best interests of the country that a Republican house of representatives should be elected at the coming fall elections. It would mean that the congress would, at its next reorganization continue to be a harmonious body, politically, and capable of acting upon definite lines of legislation in accordance with the policies of the dominant party.

There does not seem to be any reason why a Republican house should not be elected. Nothing has occurred to present a new situation to the country warranting a reversal of its previous endorsements of Republican legislation and Republican policies. Since the 53d congress, the house has been Republican and with the senate has enacted legislation which has been approved by the voters at the polls. What is there in the present platform of the Democrats to urge the voters to make a change in their national political body? And, above all, what is there in prospect to warrant dividing congress so that it cannot do anything at all?—York Dispatch.

As to Republican Confidence.

Republican confidence in an overwhelming victory at the polls next November and the election of President Roosevelt is growing stronger every day. It is confidence based upon the splendid record of the party in the past and faith in the people for the future. The party has nothing to explain and nothin to excuse and is squarely before the country on its own merits. It knows full well that the people desire no change in the present administration and that its policy of peace, protection and progress is the settled policy of the nation.—Oil City Derrick.

Parker's Popularity in Wall Street.

The trend of quiet sentiment in Vermont was a shock to the Democratic prophets. The slap at the governor of Arkansas, though principally personal, was disturbing to the Democratic managers. Maine brings them no comfort. There are no influences and no issues anywhere upon which the Democracy can depend to win any large element of the voters. The satisfaction of Wall street with Judge Parker is not a factor of popular strength, and the race issue has even failed to arouse the south.—Pittsburg Gazette.

"Mister" Parker, Speak Up.

The country is anxiously waiting to hear from Mister Parker on the tariff question. He accepts the Democratic platform which calls protection robbery. If he would only be a little more explicit and explain to us who is being robbed we would be the better able to judge of just where he stands and how far revision would go were he in a position to advocate a change in our present tariff laws.—Connellsville Courier

This is a Growing Country.

Nobody will challenge Judge Parker's assertion that the latest Republican administration spent more money than any Democratic government that preceded it. The country insists on growing, and the bigger it grows the more it costs to keep it going.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

Signs of Renewed Prosperity.

From many sections of Pennsylvania come reports of the starting up of the mills—always an indication of the confidence business interests have that financial conditions are not likely to be disturbed by the overturning of a colid administration.—Warren Mirror.

"Safe and Sane States."

The returns from Maine show that it still holds its own in the Republican column. The "sane and safe" states are standing by the Republican banner in great shape this year.—Scranton Truth.

An Appeal to Principle, Not Passion.

The independent voter is to decide the election. He is moved by appeals to principle rather than passion and will therefore vote the Republican ticket.—Mifflinburg Telegraph.

Aguinaldo Forgotten.

The Democrats appear to have overlooked Aguinaldo in their selection of campaign speakers.—Warren Mirror.

Social Advance.

Mother — Are you getting on any, Gertrude? Daughter—Oh, yes, mother. We used to be lumped in with "and others," but now we have climbed up into "some of those present."—Cincinnati Commercial-Tribune

BRIGGSY

.....By.....

ROBERT C. V. MEYERS

Copyright, 1903, by Robert C. V. Meyers

NEVER in his life had Briggsy felt queerer than when he saw Carter pick up the little grayish "wad" that had dropped from the "old man's" pocket as he drew out his bundle of keys in passing rapidly through the workshop. It was quicker than a flash. The "old man" was just taking a long step over a big splash of oil on the floor, and he didn't get his foot down on the other side of it before the money was in Carter's pocket and Carter was at work again as if nothing had happened.

A chill went up Briggsy's spine, and then he burst into perspiration all over. It was as if he had done the thing himself.

But this couldn't be the end of it. The "old man" would certainly miss his money the quicker because he always walked with his hands in his pockets. It was a wonder that he didn't miss it before he got out of the room, yet Briggsy saw the door close behind him.

"He'll be back; he'll be back in a minute," thought Briggsy. "And then what'll I do? If it was anybody but Cart! It would kill his sister. I couldn't give away Mamie's brother. Not me!"

The thought of Mamie suggested an interesting possibility, and as the minutes passed and the "old man" did not come back Briggsy had time to consider the matter. The gist of it was that Carter had not taken this money for himself, but for his sister.

Mamie was lame. She couldn't walk a step alone. But the doctor who had looked out for her case more or less since she was hurt had said that with the aid of a certain complicated machine to support her back she could walk pretty well. The machine cost $50, and that was a good deal of money to earn. Briggsy had sometimes thought of borrowing it, but never of stealing it.

Then he fell to thinking of Mamie as he was accustomed to see her evening after evening at her window as he and Cart reached home, smiling and making believe she liked to sit there forever sewing at the work for which she was paid such starvation prices, though, as she said, the work was not over fine and probably worth not much more than she received for it. That was the way with Mamie, always looking on the bright side and encouraging her brother, who was often gloomy and blamed himself for the accident which had injured her spine.

For Carter a year before, thinking to have some fun with Briggsy, whose room adjoined the tiny flat inhabited by Cart and his sister, tied a string across the stairs for tripping purposes. Mamie tripped instead of Briggsy and afterward spent months in bed, only supplementing that inactivity by sitting at her window later on, her limbs powerless.

Briggsy wondered if she were not sometimes as gloomy as Cart when nobody was by and she sewing there alone and seeing no end to her helplessness. And now there might be a chance for her to walk. And yet—

He bent over his work and filed and polished with feverish energy. When the day's duties were over he waited for Carter, for they usually went home together. Carter had a frown on his face, such a frown as settled there when he was in his "bluest" mood. They walked along in silence.

Mamie's going to get that thing that'll help her to move about," Carter all at once broke out.

"It costs $50, don't it?" asked Briggsy.

"Suppose it does!" snarled Carter. "I've got the money."

Briggsy nodded.

"I've saved up for a year," Carter went on. "I've done without—oh, everything. She's got to walk, I tell you. The doctor says she must go out in the sun and air, and how can she do it without that machine? I'm going to get that machine tonight."

So they came to the store of surgical affairs, in the window of which were displayed odd looking bandages and steels designed to assist nature when the human frame had lost some of its machinery or was deficient in normal activity.

At the door Briggsy put his hand on his friend's arm.

"Cart," he said, "do you think Mamie 'll like you for doing this?"

Carter shook off the hand.

"Don't she want to walk?" he demanded. "There's nobody but her and me, and suppose something 'd happen to me and she'd be left by herself? Could she go on sitting up there alone and nobody to do anything for her? Ain't we alone in the world—father and mother both dead?"

Thus they went into the store, and in a few minutes more they were on their way to Mamie.

To see her white face light up when she spied them from her window, to hear her exclamation when Carter showed her what he had for her!

"Oh, Tom!" she said. "And you've saved for a year to get it!" She pulled his face down to hers. "I never told you, but I've wanted to walk so much. And now I'll learn all over again. And maybe I can go and find better paying work, for if you'd get sick or be laid off at the factory what should we do with the little I earn? Oh, Tom, what a dear fellow you are!"

But Carter was gloomier than ever.

"Now," he said, "I'll go and get Mrs. Willett to help you put the apparatus on. It's perfectly simple. You see, this bandage is on top at the back, and this stay comes down behind."

Briggsy left them and went to his own room, though he did not get his supper, as he should have done. He sat down and thought. Soon he heard Mamie laughing with glee and could hear her making her first attempt at walking, clumsily, heavily, but taking a step nevertheless.

"Yes," said Briggsy, pounding his hand on the table; "I'll do it." It was a firm resolution, and yet it did not enable him to make preparations for his supper. Instead for some time he sat there in the dark and never once raised his head.

Then all at once he heard, a strange clamping sound outside his door. And there was Mamie, Cart's arm around her, positively standing upright.

"I thought I'd pay you a call," she said. "It's just grand! I'll learn to walk in no time. And then what holidays we'll have! We'll go to the country and see the trees and the birds or downtown to look at the parades. I'll soon learn, only I'm a bit nervous just now. And, Mr. George Briggs, I've come to invite you to take supper with us. We'll celebrate the day."

Of course Briggsy went.

"I'll get some cakes," said Carter and disappeared.

She was lively all the evening, so lively that it was a wonder her brother remained gloomy and at last said he had forgotten something and must go out. Briggsy also left the room.

"Going with me?" Carter asked. "I'm not feeling very well, and a walk 'll help me."

Briggsy said he believed he'd go to his own room.

"Go if you want to," growled Carter and went down the stairs.

Briggsy had a hard night of it. He scarcely slept at all. Once he said: "Anybody 'll believe it was me. I'm only a charity child. I'll do it."

In the morning he had no desire for breakfast. He did not wait for Carter, but went off alone an hour too early to go to work. He walked the streets till the factory whistle sounded and then went to the room where he and Carter and ten other men worked together.

Briggsy was the last to arrive, and the door had scarcely closed upon him when it opened to admit the "old man." His name was Hallett, and he was a fine old fellow, very well liked by the employees. He was of stout build, with a round, smooth, boyish face, and he had scanty gray hair which stood up in little tufts. It was said that these tufts stiffened like the hair on a cat's back when he was angry. On this particular morning they were in a strange tangle, as if he had been rubbing them in some dire strait of perplexity, and his manner was characterized by embarrassment.

"Er—gentlemen," he began, "there's a matter I want to speak to you about this morning." He paused and stretched his collar with his fingers as if it choked him. "To make a long story short," he continued, with a great effort, "I dropped some money in this room yesterday afternoon. Now, don't say a word. I'm not mistaken about it. I wish I were. The money was dropped right here—five ten dollar bills in a roll. The room has been searched, and the money's gone. Somebody's got it. Now, I don't want to be harsh. I know the temptation. Perhaps the man who found it didn't know it was mine. We'll say he didn't know where it came from. He just found it and put it into his pocket.

"Well, what shall we do about it? If he keeps it any longer he'll be a thief, and he'll be putting eleven honest men under unjust suspicion. He ought to give it back for the honor of his fellow workmen. And I say this: If he brings it back today that'll be the end of the matter." Then the old man went out.

There was a brief silence, and then Carter said in a low voice so charged with guilt that Briggsy looked around in wonder at the men who seemed to have no ears:

"It's a mistake. He never dropped it here."

This remark met with scant approval. It was the general opinion that the "old man" knew what he was talking about.

Just after the whistle blew one of the men called out: "If any man or boy here knows anything about that money let him be decent and own up and not let the rest of us bear the brunt of it. He'd better, for the 'old man's' got fire in his eyes, and the detectives will do the rest."

The detectives! Briggsy had not thought of them. He credited them with unfailing ability to unearth anything. It would never do to let them get in their work.

[illegible] he had handed the table and said he would "do it" rose before him. But to brand himself like that! And yet there was no time to lose. If the detectives were called in which of the employees might be accused?

The result of Briggsy's meditations upon this matter was the conviction that he must do something, and do it mighty soon, yet the afternoon kept slipping away. Briggsy had a scared eye on Carter most of the time, and he tried to keep the other one on the door, through which he momentarily expected to see the detective of his imagination appear with handcuffs for the guilty. No such calamity occurred, and the time to quit work arrived at last.

Briggsy sneaked out of the room first, and he felt that every eye was on him. The grimly humorous fancy came to him that some of these men "would think themselves mighty smart" before long. His legs felt like pieces of string, but they carried him to the door of Hallett's private office. He knocked and was admitted.

Hallett sat in his accustomed place, and nobody else was present except a strange man, rather shabby and of a sad countenance, who was leaning on the edge of the big roll top desk. Briggsy eyed the stranger with alarm, suspecting his profession.

"Well," said Hallett, "what is it? Speak up!"

Briggsy took his courage in both hands.

"It's about the money," said he.

"So I supposed," remarked Hallett.

"Could—could a feller pay it back?" Briggsy began.

Hallett looked at him curiously.

"Why, certainly," said he. "That's what I told you all this morning."

"I mean slow," gasped Briggsy. "Terribly slow—say a—a dollar a week."

Hallett glanced suddenly up at the man who was leaning on the desk. The stranger took the hint and spoke up promptly:

"I'll tell you what, my boy," said he, "you ain't made up your mind. That's what's the matter with you. You don't know what you want to say. And my suggestion to you is that you go out and take a walk and think it over. I'll have a talk with you by and by."

"I'm ready," Briggsy began.

"No, you ain't," said the man. "You ain't ready, and neither am I. Go out and take a walk."

And Briggsy went.

In his room that evening he hardened his heart to bear the brand of shame. Nobody came near him. He judged that Mamie was not in her room. She must have learned to walk already, and her brother had gone out with her. She would have a good time, and Briggsy was glad of it, and as this agreeable thought came to temper the bitterness of his reflections he felt conscious of a drowsiness which was exceedingly merciful, and so he fell asleep, fully dressed, upon his bed.

"HAVE YOU BROUGHT THE MONEY?"

He awoke refreshed and with a better courage in the early morning, and after a bite of breakfast he walked toward the factory with a strong and increasing resolution. He saw nothing of the detective nor of Mr. Hallett. He had vaguely expected that they would be waiting for him at the factory gate. One or two men looked at him peculiarly, but he encountered no unusual incident until he was inside the factory, when a man from the office met him and told him to go to Mr. Hallett's private room. This summons was like the closing of prison gates behind him, but he obeyed it readily.

He had decided to make no further offer to return the money piecemeal. He would earn it some day. That was all he knew about the matter. People were permitted to earn a little money in prison, he had heard. Anyhow, he would do his best. The money was spent. It couldn't be got back even if Carter were found out.

In the office were Mr. Hallett and the detective. One might have supposed that they hadn't moved since Briggsy was there last, their attitudes being precisely as he remembered them.

"Well, Briggs," said Hallett, "have you brought the money?"

"No," replied the boy. "I haven't brought it, and I can't bring it. It's gone. But you'll get it some day. That I'll swear to."

"Briggs," said the "old man" sternly, "you didn't take that money, but you know who did."

Briggsy drew himself up to his full height, which was a little more than five feet. He slapped himself on the chest.

"I'm the man," said he. "Lock me up."

Hallett looked at him for some seconds, smiling.

"We've found out where the money went," he said.

Briggsy turned faint.

"Don't you believe it!" he said. "You just listen to me, and I'll"—

"It went to buy a piece of apparatus for Miss Mamie Carter, a very bright, nice, honest little girl, as I see her," said Hallett. "She called on me last evening."

"She—called—on—you!"

"Yes," said Hallett. "She came with her brother. He was there by her request—distinctly by her request."

"You see," continued the "old man," "our little friend, our poor little friend who is lame, happened to hear about some money being lost, and, being of the feminine gender, she jumped to a conclusion. So she had it out with her brother, and the upshot of it was that he brought her to me with the walking machine in her hands, for, of course, she couldn't wear it after she'd found out how she'd come by it.

"Well," continued Hallett, after a pause, "that was a sight to draw tears from our friend here"—he jerked his thumb at the detective—"who doesn't weep often, as I'm well convinced. Miss Mamie was afraid the man who sold the machine wouldn't take it back and pay full price, but she was going to earn the difference herself. Now, it just struck me suddenly as she was making this proposal that she could earn the money easier if she had the harness to wear, so I begged her to keep it. And then her brother and I got down to business and settled our little affair upon some such basis as you proposed yesterday afternoon. So there'll be no trouble.

CLOSE TO NATURE.

The American Farmer the Greatest Man in the World.

THE American farmer is the greatest man in the world to-day because he is master of the soil—he is gaining in intelligence quite as rapidly as his products are increasing in magnitude. Our recent combines of capital in United States measured in money are enormous, yet such figures sink into insignificance when compared to the money, brain and brawn invested in agricultural industries. For instance, the farmers of Minnesota and Dakota have received $300,000,000 for their products in a single year. The farmer knows what Nature will bring forth for him from his experience in the past. He knows if certain seeds are planted and properly cared for that Nature will take care of the rest. In the same way you are master of your own destiny.

Take proper care of your own body and all will be well—but allow the weeds to grow and you will reap a crop of sickness. Ella Wheeler Wilcox well says: "If you come into the world with weak lungs or anæmic blood it will require more effort for you to become robust than for some well born virile child who has only to breathe or frolic to keep in health." "Fear nothing," says Dr. Pierce, "providing your blood is in good order—keep your mind on the fact that you were meant to live and it only needs a little effort on your own part to keep healthy and strong—rid your body of the poisons that are apt to accumulate and your system is ready to ward off the attack of the germs of disease." Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery makes rich, red blood—by increasing the number of red blood corpuscles. There is no alcohol in this great tonic to shrivel up the red blood corpuscles. An alterative extract, made only of herbs and roots it goes about its work in nature's way. Only good can come from its use as it stimulates the liver into proper action, and feeds the worn-out nerves, stomach and heart on pure blood. Used for over a third of a century it has sold more largely than any other blood medicine in the United States. More bottles of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery are sold to-day than ever before—that is the true test of its medicinal value after thirty-seven years of deserved popularity. Have you ever thought that it is probable that the earth supplied us with the means to keep our bodily vigor, our health, if we only knew it? The animals know by instinct what is good for them and will search until they find in some plant what they need for correcting indigestion or constipation, etc. Is it, therefore, not possible that there are roots and herbs supplied by nature which will cure the diseases that afflict human kind? That is why Dr. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y., has such faith in his "Medical Discovery." Years ago, when he was in general and active practice, he found that a combination of certain herbs and roots made into an alterative extract without the use of alcohol, would always put the stomach into a healthy condition, nourish the tissues, feed the blood and nerves and put healthy tone into the whole system.

There are some people who can lose fat to advantage, but the loss of flesh is one of the accepted evidences of failing health. As flesh-making processes begin in the stomach, so naturally when there is loss of flesh we look first to the stomach for the cause. And the cause is generally found to be disease of the stomach and digestive and nutritive tracts, resulting in loss of nutrition and consequent physical weakness.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery restores the lost flesh by curing diseases of the stomach and other organs of digestion and nutrition and enabling the perfect digestion and assimilation of food from which flesh and strength are made.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery purifies the blood and entirely eradicates the poisons that breed and feed disease. It thus cures scrofula, eczema, erysipelas, boils, pimples and other eruptions that mar and scar the skin. Pure blood is essential to good health. The weak, run-down, debilitated condition which so many people experience is commonly the effect of impure blood. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery not only cleanses the blood of impurities, but it increases the activity of the blood-making glands, and it enriches the body with an abundant supply of pure, rich blood.

"I consider Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery the most wonderful blood remedy that a sick man can use," writes Mr. P. Schug, of 653 Lake Street, Appleton, Wis. "Nine bottles changed me from a physical wreck to a well man within a few short weeks. Some two years ago, through complications in sickness I became blood-poisoned, which spread through the entire system, making me very miserable. Skin became yellow, eyes glassy, and my step slow and heavy. A general falling off of flesh followed the loss of appetite, and I became thin and emaciated. I felt much worried, as the doctor's prescriptions did not help me any, but after I had taken only one bottle of 'Golden Medical Discovery' I felt that I was on the road to speedy recovery, so I continued taking it regularly for ten weeks, and am glad to say that at the end of that time the poison was eliminated from my system and I was in wonderfully good health and strength."

"Our little boy, Ray M. Cronk, age five years, is taking the 'Golden Medical Discovery,' having had typhoid fever last April," writes Mrs. L. D. Cronk, Redfield, Oswego Co., N. Y. "He had a four week's run of the fever, then took cold and had a relapse which put him back five weeks and left him in a weakened condition. He has taken three bottles of 'Golden Medical Discovery' and three vials of your 'Pellets,' and is getting to be a nice, fat little boy, for which we are very thankful. Mr. Cronk is going to have his photo taken soon and send you one, also little Ray's, so that you can see two more whose lives your wonderful medicines have saved. Our dealers are selling your medicines faster than ever before, since my husband's recovery, as every one gave him up to die, except myself. I had great faith in your wonderful medicines and knew they would help and cure him and I was not disappointed."

Song of The County Fair.

The county fair has got the circus beat,
Of all the shows it is the biggest treat.
For you can go to it and stay all day
And then, when it is time to come away.
There's still so much left, for you to see
You've got to go again next day, by gee.
I labor like an ox the summer through
To save the dough to go and take Her, too.
If you're a farmer boy like me, o course.
You've got to go and view the biggest horse,
The one that weighs about two thousand pound
And stands up sixteen hands above the ground;
And not far off you'll find the Jersey cows
Which patiently some patent fodder browse.
When here about an hour or so you've stayed,
It's time to set Her up to lemonade.
In that long shed are all the big machines
For hoeing corn and cultivating beans,
They're fine to look at, but they're not for me,
My back and arms are cheaper, don't you see?
And next you go to see the blooming fruit,
Peaches and grapes the finest taste to suit;
This sight of luciousness will make it seem
The proper thing to treat Her to ice cream.
And now it's time to hurry to the track,
Where speeders—some that trot and some that racks—
Are warming up their bones before the race;
"They're off," and twice they circle fast around
And only hit the high points of the ground;
All afternoon you watch the sport with joy,
While She helps you enrich the peanut boy.
At last the sun has set, the day in done,
And every minute has been packed with fun;
You're sorry but you know it's time to go.
Although you hate to leave the wonderous show.
But you don't leave it all by quite a lot.
And many envy you, as like as not;
Of all the fair let others keep the rest,
You take Her home, and She's by far the best.

A Power for Good.

The pills that are potent in their action and pleasant in effect are DeWitt's Little Early Risers. W. S. Philpot, of Albany, Ga., says: "During a billious attack I took one. The October "Smart Set."

The October number of The Smart Set is a veritable mines of brilliant stories and poems. "Moored," by Anna A. Rogers, is the title of the novelette which opens the issue. It is a story full of power and quiet humor, dealing with the temptation which comes to the young wife of a naval officer while he is abroad and she is "moored" at home. The tale leaves a remarkable vivid impression and will attract wide attention.

Gouverneur Morris, in his short story, "The Lady of Moods," has written as striking a piece of work as has recently appeared in any magazine. Its wonderful art stamps this young author as a genius. In a wholly different vein is the late Guy Wetmore Carryl's humorous tale, "A Tide in the Affairs of Stephen Girdler." It is brimful of delightful character drawing. In "The Two Ghosts" Richard Lee Gallienne is at his best as a good-natured satirist and brilliant epigrammatist. "When Delos Drifted," a story by Beatrix Demarest Lloyd, a new writer of great promise, is one of the most notable in the number, through one must remember the poetic beauty of Zona Gale's "A Land a Great Way Off," the intense realism of Theodore Waters's "The Passing of Gon Out," the keen analytical power of Willard French's "The Mastiff," a story of political life in Washington, and the cleverness of Barry Pain's "The Rewards of Perseverance," the last and perhaps the best in the series of detective stories which the distinguished English author has written exclusively for the Smart Set.

Two essays, one by Agnes Repplier, the other by F. J. Knight Adkin, add charm to this number; and there are excellent poems by such favorite verse-writers as Joaquin Miller, Ernest McGaffey, Theodosia Garrison, Madeline Bridges, P. McArthur, Frank Lillie Pollock, Thomas Walsh and Arthur Macy. Variety is the distinguishing note of the October Smart Set, and no two of its stories are in any way alike.

In Memory of Joseph A. Gengher.

The following resolutions were adopted by the Roosevelt Republican Club at a special meeting held in their club rooms on Wednesday evening in memory of Joseph Allen Gengher.

WHEREAS, God in His omniscient but inscrutable providence, has suddenly removed from this earth our friend and brother member Joseph A. Gengher.

AND, WHEREAS, our beloved brother stood in the full prime of young manhood, upon the threshold of a happy and prosperous career, and will be sadly missed, not only in this club, but from among a host of friends

Therefore be it Resolved, that the Roosevelt Republican Club of Bellefonte hereby expresses its grateful appreciation of the true worth, kind disposition and christian manhood of Joseph A. Gengher whose untimely death we deeply mourn.

And be it Further Resolved, that we offer to the family of our deceased brother, our most tender sympathy, in the crushing affliction that has bereft them of a loving son and brother, with the sincere trust that God may assist them to bear in humble submission the grievous burden He has laid upon them.

Signed

Feet Swollen to Immense Size.

"I had kidney trouble so bad that I could not work," says J. J. Cox of Valley View, Ky., "my feet were swollen to immense size and I was confined to my bed and physicians were unable to give me any rerief. My doctor finally prescribed Foley's Kidney Cure which made a well man of me." For sale by C. M. Parrish.

Lost His Flock of Turkeys.

Wild turkeys promises to be unusually plenty on the mountains near Bush hollow, back of Unionville. During the summer Arista Lucas has successfully raised a flock of more than three dozen choice breed turkeys until they were about two-thirds grown. About harvest time a flock of wild turkeys would come down off the mountain to feed in Mr. Lucas's grain fields. The result was that the wild turkeys and Mr. Lucas's turkeys got to associating together and one day about two weeks ago when the wild turkeys departed for their roosts in the mountain Lucas's entire flock accompanied them and since that time, though Mr. Lucas and his sons have spent several days in the woods trying to locate them, not a sign of either the tame turkeys or the wild turkey has been discovered.

What's in a Name?

Everything is in the name when it comes to Witch Hazel Salve. E. C. DeWitt & Co., of Chicago, discovered some years ago how to make a salve from Witch Hazel that is a specific for Piles. The next meeting of the association will take place at Grange Hall, Centre Hall, on Sept. 22nd, at 6 o'clock in the evening.

A Wedding in Wisconsin.

The editor in Wisconsin has the advertising idea proper, and draws the line nowhere. Here is his writeup of a wedding; "Miss Jennie Jones and Bob Henry were married at the Jones mansion last night. The bride is the daughter of our constable Jones, who made a good officer and undoubtedly will be re-elected in the spring. He offers a fine horse for sale in another column. The groom runs a grocerys ,tore on Main street and is a good patron of our ad. columns, and has a new line of bargains this week. All summer he paid two cents more for butter than any other store in town. The happy couple left on the ten o'clock train for Milwaukee to visit the bride's uncle, who is reported to have lots of money and Bright's disease. Bob certainly has an eye for business.

The Last Interview With Russia's Late Minister of the Interior.

A few days before his assassination the conservation "darkest counselor of the Czar." Wiatcheslaff Konstantinovitch De Plehve, late Mininter of the Interior of Russia, granted to an American, John Callan O Laughlin, St. Petersburg war correspondent for Collier's Weekly, an interview which is published in the August 27 issue of that paper in which he is reported to have said:

"Nihilism knows no law and no order. It strives to produce rebellion and substitute chaos for government. Its disciples are comparatively few in number, belong to the criminal class, and are consequently subject to police surveillance. There is no fear for Russia from this source."

Relative to the war in the East the late Minister said: "Neither the Emperor nor the people wanted war with Japan. We desire only an open port on the Pacific and safe communication with it, and peace instead of disorder among our neighbors. Manchuria has been in a state of disorder which menaced foreign life and property, and the interests of the world in general and our own special interests demanded that we should step in and restore tranquility. The United States was moved by the same reasons to intervene in Cuba. We established order, and we were gradually restoring Chinese administration when the war came upon us. For the war Japan had made every preparation, while we had gone on believing her protestations of desire to peacefully settle the question in dispute."

Referring to the American sympathy with Japan as generally expressed in the American press, he said:

"I can not understand the reason. We have always been friends, and we have proven our friendship. Moreover, Americans are a business people. They must know that Russia is not a manufacturing State, that Russia is and will be in need of the products of their energy. Japan on the other hand, is a manufacturing nation, which is able to deliver its output, practically without cost, in China, while American goods, to reach that market, must pay a heavy freight bill. Japan's development is therefore antagonistic to American commercial interests."

The Stomach is the Man.

A weak stomach weakens the man, because it cannot transform the food he eats into nourishment. Health and strength cannot be restored to any sick man or weak woman without first restoring health and strength to the stomach. A weak stomach cannot digest enough food to feed the tissues and revive the tired and run down limbs and organs of the body. Kodol Dyspepsia Cure digests what you eat, cleanses and strengthens the glands and membrances of the stomach, and cures indigestion, dyspepsia and all stomach troubles Sold by Green's Pharmacy.

The Renewal a Strain.

Vacation is over. Again the school bell rings at morning and at noon, again with tens of thousonds the hardest kind of work has begun, the renewal of which is a mental and physical strain to all except the most rugged. The little girl that a few days ago had roses in her cheeks, and the little boy whose lips were then so red you would have insisted that they had been "kissed by strawberries," have already lost something of the appearance of health. Now is a time when many children should be given a tonic, which may avert much serious trouble, and we know of no other so highly to be recommended as Hood's Sarsaparilla, which, strengthens the nerves, perfects digestion and assimilation, and aids mental development by building up the whole system.

Puts Flesh on Thin People

Vin-te-na builds tissue and muscle, fills out the hollow places, makes graceful curves instead of sharp angles, adds flesh to thin, bony figures, and strengthens as it builds. It improves the appetite, increases the assimilation of food, removes all impurities from the blood, and produces a quick restoration to general health, in fact a lastting cure.

Vin-te-na is not a "symptom remedy." It goes directly to the source of all weakness, and positively removes the cause. It acts quickly because it goes directly into the circulation, cleansing, strengthening and enriching the blood with the precise elements which the tired and weakened nervous system requires.

BRIEF MENTION

Short Items of Local Interest Gathered By The Way Side

—Mrs. Munson entertained a party at bridge on Tuesday night, in honor of Mrs. Shaffner.

—Miss Mary Nolan, daughter of the late Jerry Nolan, has accepted a position as clerk in Joseph Brothers & Co's., store.

—Clyde Lucas, one of the agents of the Baltimore Life Insurance Co., at Tyrone, was sent to his home at Howard with typhoid fever.

—James Reed Jr., a son of William Reed, of Coleville, was arrested Monday afternoon charged with stealing a lap robe from Lew Bullock of Milesburg.

—Filo, the nine-year-old son of Jerry Gunsallus of Snow Shoe, was bitten on the leg near the ankle by a snake last Tuesday. He had gone to the field to bring in the cows. His leg swelled greatly and he had medical attention but notwithstanding this blood poisoning has developed and it is feared the leg will have to be amputated.

—Mr. and Mrs. Samuel A. Donachy are sending out invitations to the approaching marriage of their daughter, Lera Virginia to Mr. Franklin Montgomery Derstine, of Altoona, which happy event will take place on Wednesday morning, September 28, 1904, at half-past eight, at the residence of the brides parents, No. 8, North Allegheny street.

—The Tournament Assembly held at Lock Haven last Friday night was a great success. On the list of patronesses were Mesdames Lane and Cooper of Bellefonte. Among those who attended from here were Misses Hoy, Harris, North, Crider, Steinman, and Messrs. Thomas Beaver, M. A. Jackson, George T. Bush, Robert Valentine, W. A. Gephart, Dan Reamer, Edmund Blanchard, P. J. Lane, Wilson Gephart and John Munson.

—Seventeen young men entered State College freshman class this year without conditions or examinations on certificate from the Bellefonte Academy. Miss Jennie Harper and Elliott Vandeventer, both Academy students; the former entered Smith's College at Northampton, Mass., one of the largest colleges for girls in the country and the latter went to Cornell both simply on certificates from the Bellefonte Academy and without further examination.

—Miss Emma Frick, daughter of Rev. N. C. Frick, the pastor of the Disciple church at Eagleville, was married on Tuesday afternoon last to Harry Kunes, also of Eagleville. The ceremony was performed by her father and was very quiet, only a very few intimate friends being present. The wedding was a surprise to nearly every one and the best wishes go to both of the contracting parties from a host of friends, who wish them a happy and prosperous journey through life.

—W. D. Zerby, who has been a law student in the office of Orvis, Bower & Orvis for the past two years, received notice on Monday from the state examining board that he had successfully passed his examinations and was entitled to practice in the courts of this state. Mr. Zerby is a native of Penn Twp., and from good, old democratic stock. He is a graduate of Bucknell College, where he made a good record. For the present he will maintain a desk in the office of Orvis, Bower & Orvis.

—James C. McCloskey, city editor of the Daily Express, of Lock Haven, Pa., for the last twenty-two years, died Sunday at his home there, at the age of 64 years, from a complication of diseases, superinduced by Bright's disease. He leaves a widow and two sons. Mr. McCloskey was one of that class of busy workers for the press who, alive to their daily obligations to the public, pursue their way modestly and unostentatiously in the exacting duties of their profession, and give credit and character to their calling.

—In the railroad station at Barnesboro, Cambria county, Thursday morning, Stephen Fellows, a miner of Barnesboro, shot down his wife and 16-year son Charlee. Mrs. Fellows received three bullets in various parts of her head and no hope is entertained for her recovery. The boy has a deep scalp wound, caused by a glancing shot while another ball passed from the right ear downward through the neck, and there is but little chance of saving his life. Both victims were taken to the Memorial hospital at Johnstown. Jealously of his wife, who is nearly twenty years younger than he, is said to be the motive for Fellows crime. The couple have not been living together for two months, and Mrs. Fellows in company with her son, was about to leave for her sister's home, in Stamford, Conn., when the two were shot down by the husband and father, who had evidently expected such a move on their part. Fellows is in jail at Ebensburg.

—Mrs. Thomas A. Shoemaker gave a dinner on Tuesday evening at the Country Club.

—The new Hotel Haag and its enterprising landlord, Fred Mosebarger have inaugurated a bus service between the trains and this hotel. They have a brand new, handsome bus which meets every train and is driven by Fred McCulley. It presents a handsome appearance and cannot help but attract attention and trade to the Hotel Haag.

—The one year old daughter of Win Tate, formerly of this place, but late of Punxsutawney, died at her home in Punxsutawney Sunday. The remains were brought to Bellefonte on the 1:25 train Tuesday afternoon and taken to the Reformed church where funeral services were conducted by Rev. Ambrose Schmidt. Interment was made in the Union cemetery.

—Monday a meeting of the Bellefonte High School Athletic Association was held and the following officers were elected: President, Earle Taylor; Vice-President, Paul Wetzel; Secretary, Loyd Markle; Treasurer, William Kuhn; Manager, Paul Ettere. Earle Taylor was elected captain of the foot ball team. If you wish to play them write to Manager Ettere, Bellefonte, Pa.

—"Cunningham Bro's.," foundry and machine shops, is the name of a new institution established here the past week. Messrs. J. Mitch and Edward Cunningham comprise the firm and they purchased the lot and building of the defunct "Houser Springless Lock Co." near the Poorhouse. They will install a lot of new machinery and a well-equipped foundry for the building of all kinds of work in that line, in which both are expert workmen. General repair work and specialties will be their line and they have considerable business in prospect, and have plenty of room to enlarge as they grow.

—One day last week Rev. Crittenden presented Ira Green and William Dillen each with a Bible, the gift of the Centre county Bible society. One evening since, Green asked night watchman Philip Garbrick to read a chapter to him. Garbrick opened the good book at random and began to read and was soon astonished to notice how applicable were the words he was reading to the case of Green and Dillen. In fact, so remarkable was the coincidence of the Bible words to the facts in Green's case that he remarked the fact and proclaimed that "everything seemed to be against them." To appreciate the remarkable occurrence get your Bible and read the 35th chapter of Numbers.

PRETTY HOME WEDDING.

Miss Mary Garthoff and Mr. Linn Blackford United in Marriage.

On Friday evening at 7 o'clock Miss Mary A. Garthoff, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Garthoff was united in marriage to Linn Blackford, by Rev. H. C. Holloway, D. D. of the Lutheran church. The happy union was made with the ring ceremony and was performed at the brides home on Bishop street.

Only the immediate friends and relatives of the young couple were present. After the words was said that made these two hearts beat as one, an excellent wedding dinner was served followed by a reception to which a number of their friends called to extend their congratulations and best wishes. The bride is a beautiful and accomplished young lady and has hosts of friends. The groom is a very popular young man in Bellefonte and likewise has many friends. He is Solicitor for the Bell Telephone Company at this place and has been quite successful in his work. He is also a member of Company B. 5th Regiment and served with distinction at "Ashland," during the coal strike.

During the evening several serenading parties visited the newly married couple at the Garthoff home and you would have thought the world was coming to an end, from the noise they made. Toward midnight the "Rocky Gorge Sextette," sang several very pretty selections in honor of the young benedict and his wife. This paper joins with their many friends to wish them unbounded happiness and joy through life.

GOOD NEWS FOR BELLEFONTE.

Bellefonte Furnace to be Placed in Operation at Once.

The Republican can announce today on the best of authority that the Bellefonte Furnace which has been idle for several months past will soon be in operation in all its branches. On Monday William Kelly of Sparrows Point, Maryland, began work tearing out and relining the furnace and this work will be pushed night and day until completion. Mr. Kelly is an old and experienced furnace man and has relined both the Nittany and Bellefonte furnace several times before. It is expected that this work will be completed so as to start the furnace somewhere between October 15th and 20th.

The ore mines at Scotia, Gatesburg and Red bank will start to work next Monday to mine the ore for Bellefonte furnace.

This company is entirely separate from the company that operates the Nittany furnace and will be under the management of J. W. Gephart.

The starting of this furnace is good news to the people of Bellefonte and of incalculable benefit to all classes. The starting of the furnace is possible owing to the rise in the price of iron which is steadily going up as the fact of Roosevelt's election becomes more apparent.

FOR STATE SENATOR.

Henry C. Quigley Receives the Endorsement of Centre County Republicans.

The Republican Primary election in Centre County for the selection of a candidate for State Senator to succeed the late Senator Patton were held on Saturday afternoon and evening. Henry C. Quigley Esq., carried off the honors in Centre County defeating Col. Edward R. Chambers. He will therefore get the conferees to be selected at the county convention at Grange Park, Centre Hall, today.

Col. E. A. Irvin, of Curwensville, carried Clinton county and also his home county, Clearfield, thus probably insuring his nomination. Roland D. Swope Esq., of Clearfield county, was the candidate against Col. Irvin and the vote was very close.

The delegates elected from Bellefonte North Ward—Harry Keller, J. L. Montgomery, Samuel Mulbarger, Charles F. Cook, Wm. Clark Sr., Frank C. Williams, Dr. M. J. Locke.

South Ward—John Woomer, S. E. Goss, H. H. Montgomery, Henry Brown

West Ward—John D. Love, Wm. H. Hamilton, Isaac Thomas Jr.

COUNCIL MEETING.

Business Transacted by Boro's Legislative Body.

The borough council met in regular session on Monday evening with President Jenkins in the chair and the following members present: Kirk, Fenlon, Seibert, Wise, Keichline, and Derstine.

The minutes of the previous meeting were read by the clerk, Mr. Kelly and approved. Messrs. John J. Bower, and W. Harrison Walker, on behalf of the residents of East Linn street reported a scarcity of water in that end of the town.

Among the boro officers present were Burgess Walker, Solicitor Fortney, Water Superintendent Rine and Street Commissioner Shaughensey.

Residents of East Bishop street asked for permission to lay a sewer on that street from Penn to Allegheny street. Referred to the street committee.

The street committee have laid a new crossing on Spring street.

Chairman Kirk, of the Sanitary Committee reported quite a number of hog pens in town that were a nuisance and a menace to the health of the community.

Chairman Keichline of Market committee reported receiving $17 from market fees.

Report of Finance Committee was as follows:

Mrs. Louisa Bush agreed to ask no damages from boro for cutting away ledge of rock below Arcade necessitated by the widening of Water street seven feet on certain conditions which were agreed on.

An arc light was granted the residents of East Howard street to be placed at the intersection of Penn and Howard streets.

50 per cent. of the taxes against Petrikin Hall owned by the W. C. T. U., was voted to be exonerated.

The request of the residents of East Linn street for more water created quite an argument between Messrs. Kirk, Fenlon and Seibert. It seems that there has been a good deal of complaint in regard to the water supply. Both the pump at the Phoenix station and the steam pump are running. It looked as if there are a great many leaks in the pipes somewhere.

The hog question was again taken up. It seems that several bad hog pens are located South Penn and East Logan streets. Council decided that they could no nothing that citizens themselves must make complaint before Burgess against owners of offensive pig pens.
